

MCOR's History

MCOR, a brand of Epoxytec International Inc., was originally established by Joe Caputi with original core products developed in 1990. The company's history demonstrates experience, resilience, and drive for excellence in the protective coating industry.

As an Italian immigrant living in New York, Joe Caputi began his career as an independent field technician for Belzona in 1973. Joe mastered the art of selling and, more importantly, became intrinsically involved in all aspects of coatings for the various industries that utilize and benefit from them.

He continued to work with Belzona throughout the 1980s when he moved to South Florida and became an independent Belzona distributor, introducing cold polymer repairs and coatings throughout Florida, as well as some Central and South American regions.

In 1989, Joe parted ways with Belzona and, soon after, Epoxytec was founded. Joe's knowledge of protective coatings and business acumen was a recipe for success. As various industries expanded and so did his product line.

Michael Caputi joined in 2001. Like his father, his keen entrepreneurial spirit drove Michael to grow Epoxytec, which would ultimately lead to the launch of MCOR.

Seeking to further define their product line, the MCOR brand was created in 2010 to specialize in coating polymers designed primarily to address high heat, abrasion, and chemical. Today, MCOR services at a global level with its headquarters in Florida – manufactured in the USA. MCOR continues to grow and excel with its team of chemists and network of distributors. With over four decades of experience, this father-son duo is proud of the MCOR journey and its future.
